Email security made accessible

Keeping your business, your business is what Secure-mail is all about

Once you become a Secure-mail subscriber we are sure you'll want to enable all your contacts to keep their email secure, too.

There are two ways to do this: you could refer them to the full service or invite them to use our free software, Secure-mail:lite.

Secure-mail:lite offers you instant email security with contacts who don't subscribe to the full Secure-mail service – it could be that you're working on a temporary project or transaction, or that you occasionally need to email someone. Whatever the reason or frequency, you want your emails to be totally secure.

It's easy to organise and completely free of charge

As a Secure-mail subscriber you just call us or login to your account on our website, tell us who you want to invite, and leave the rest to us.

We'll send them a link to the software which is small enough to download quickly. And if they know how to use email, they'll have no problem using the service to manually decrypt and encrypt emails from you.

There's virtually no limit to the number of people you can invite and you can widen the group of Secure-mail users they can communicate securely with at any time.

Of course, it's not a replacement for the subscribed service which simply sits between your internet connection and your email server; automatically and seamlessly encrypting and decrypting email without any intervention from you.

If you'd rather refer someone to the full service you can do that too, and when they become subscribers, by way of a thank you from Securecoms, you'll receive a credit to your subscription.*

Whichever way you want to enable your contacts to secure their email, we have a solution for you.
